

May 17, 1970

My son attends a distant university and it had been some time since he had been home; in fact, between Christmas and Easter vacation his hair had had time to grow much longer, so upon his arrival at the airport I was much surprized to the change and somewhat embarrassed to see heads turn to stare at him. However, after he had been home for awhile, I became used to his appearance, and told him, "it kinda grows on me", to which his reply was, No, it grows on me!", Later upon meeting some of his old high school friends at the Mall, I laughingly told them that college had "gone to his head"!
